Surprise Custody Examination

To protect investors who entrust their funds and securities to registered investment advisers (RIAs), the SEC adopted amendments to the Custody Rule 206(4)-2 under the Advisers Act of 1940. The Custody Rule contains several provisions and requirements, including an independent examination ("surprise custody examination").

The Custody Rule 206(4)-2

When an adviser is deemed to have custody of a client's funds or securities, the Custody Rule subjects the adviser to the following requirements:

- The adviser must obtain an annual surprise custody examination by a Public Company Accounting Oversight Board- (PCAOB) registered independent accounting firm.
- The adviser must have the custodian who maintains the client's cash and securities send account statements directly to the clients.
- The adviser is required to obtain a report on the internal controls relating to the custody of those assets from a PCAOB-registered independent public accountant (unless an independent custodian maintains the client's assets).
- The examination report must be submitted electronically to the SEC.
